Thug Fells R. H. Stone and Robs Him of $70.00

Mr. Robt. H. Stone, Irma's genial baker, received the surprise of his life last Saturday evening when he was struck on the head as he stepped outside his bake shop to close up for the night.

As usual, Mr. Stone locked his front door on the inside and, taking the cash out of the till put it in his pocket and went out through the kitchen to the back door on the south side of the building. On this particular night the wind was blowing hard and the night was extremely dark—more particularly around this back door as there was no light from the street showing here.

Mr. Stone did not see or hear anyone. When he regained consciousness he was sitting in a coal bin just inside the door where he had been left about forty or forty-five minutes before.

At 11:25 p.m. Mr. Stone was able to make his way into the harness repair shop next door from where he obtained assistance. Dr. Greenberg took the injured man to the Wainwright hospital for an X-ray examination which showed there were no fractures. The police were notified and immediately started an investigation but apparently could find no clue.

All the cash which Mr. Stone had in his pockets amounting to $70.00, was taken by the thug—two thugs.

Group One of Ladies' Aid Congratulated on Work

The April meeting of the Irma Ladies' Aid was held last Thursday at the home of Mrs. A. H. Locke.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Tripp, Rev. Mr. Geeson lead the devotionals, reading part of the 12th chapter in Romans, and leading in prayer. Mrs. James Fenton then conducted the business, the roll call finding eleven members present. The minutes were read and found correct. The treasurer gave a balance of $47.85 on hand after all bills were paid.

The Aid, having divided up into three groups for the purpose of ways and means to raise funds, No. 1 group turned in their earnings of $38.80. Mrs. Geeson leader of group 2, and Mrs. Locke, leader of group three, moved hearty congratulations to group one for their splendid report.

Mrs. N. S. Johnson leader of group one, sincerely thanked the members of her group for their generous support. As there is a lot of work to be done on the manse, both inside and out, it was decided to make a start by first having the roof repaired.

The work for the manse was brought up and it was decided to make a start on a quilt at the next meeting, each one bringing pieces for one or more blocks and a pattern if possible.

The acting president suggested several ways of making our Aid meetings more attractive and inspiring, for we all realize the work of the church must be supported with inspiration and prayer.

Rev. Mr. Geeson closed the meeting with the benediction and following this was the social half hour when Mrs. Reeds and Mrs. Osterhout assisting hostesses, served a dainty luncheon.

The May meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Reeds; hostesses: Mrs. J. Fenton and Mrs. Love.

Wedding Bells

KELLY — MILLER
The home of Mrs. E. J. Kelly, of Plaxtol was the scene of a very pretty wedding, Wednesday afternoon, April 18th, when her only daughter, Mary Jane Swann Kelly was united in marriage to Hugh Charles Miller, of Mayfield district, by the Rev. W. S. Brooker, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, at 2:30 p.m.

The bride, who was given away by her mother, looked charming in a French blue, shot with silver silk taffeta dress, and blue hat and grey shoes. She carried a bouquet of white carnations, blue iris and daffodils. The bridesmaid, Miss Agnes Carsell, wore a rose pink satin dress with white hat and shoes to match, and carried a bouquet of roses, tulips, blue iris and daffodils. The bridesmaid was ably supported by Mr. Joe Donaldson. The home was tastefully decorated for the occasion, and the wedding ceremony was performed under a canopy of white ribbon work interspersed with Easter lilies. After the congratulations being given, the bridal party adjourned to the Plaxtol school house, where they received the congratulations of the assembled guests, numbering about 60. The bridal party sat down to a sumptuous dinner which was enjoyed by all. The bride's table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake resting on white

UNITED CHURCH NOTES

The services next Sunday will be at Paschenale, Roseberry and Irma. The fourth sermon in the series on the Sermon on the Mount will deal with the topic, "The New Quality of Life as it Affects the World." A hearty invitation is extended to all.

The mid-week group meeting will be held at 8 p.m. on Wednesdays during the summer months.

In the discourse commonly known as the Sermon on the Mount (Matthew chapters 5, 6 and 7) Jesus unfolded an ideal of human life in beautiful and compelling language. Here is a warm living truth that none can afford to disregard. These words give words of life, and we weave our clever foolishness around them only to lose their meaning, and then we wonder how it is that life is so hard to understand. We can never know the secret of a happy life until we learn to appreciate these words of the Master who knew life intimately and completely. Whatever difficulty we find in these words of divine wisdom is really not in the words but in ourselves. Jesus speaks to the heart within us and if only the heart can hear His words then no man can fail to come to some understanding of them.

Beneath all differences of mind, body and temperament life is much the same for us all. It is for this deeper life that Jesus offers us His eternal truth. These are words of great promise and peace. They tell us not only of limitless mercy above, but also of limitless possibility within us. There is a deep within us that cannot live by bread alone, and a love that cannot feed on itself. Let us lay our sins at the feet of Jesus that they may be forgiven, and give to Him our heart, mind and strength that He may keep us in the way of truth.

net. After dinner the bride cut the wedding cake, and the toasts were received by the bride and groom from a number of guests at the table. Assisting at the tables were Mrs. Polard, Miss Pollard, Mrs. Carrell and Mrs. James Stead. The school house was tastefully decorated with blue and pink and Easter lilies. The wedding dance was at 8 o'clock which lasted to the wee wee sm's, music being supplied by the McEllan boys' orchestra. Mr. and Mrs. Miller were the recipients of many useful presents and these will be on display at her mother's home on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Miller will reside on the groom's farm in the Mayfield district.

There will be service in the United church on Sunday, April 22, at 8 p.m. The next meeting of the W. A. will be held on May 1st at the home of Mrs. Yeend. M. Thurston, Secretary, W.A.

The Western Economic Outlook

Writing in "Agricultural and Industrial Progress in Canada," Mr. John F. Sweeting, Industrial Commissioner, Western Lines, Canadian Pacific Railway, declares that confidence in the outlook for 1934 business is the dominant feature of the Western situation. Signs are not lacking in many parts of Canada that we are slowly emerging from the depression of the past four years. Improvement appears to be more noticeable in the Eastern parts of Canada, where some acceleration is apparent in the manufacturing industries. In the West where we depend almost entirely on agriculture, recovery will necessarily be more slow in coming. As a matter of fact we cannot hope for any great degree of prosperity whilst agriculture languishes. A good crop, fair prices for our wheat, and a market for our products are the needful factors. Mr. Sweeting says that improvement in trade, together with the realization that an upturn is now noticeable, has brought back the more satisfactory feeling that it is possible to consider that a period of trade and industrial expansion is, to a moderate degree, justified. Anticipated during the last few months, it is not difficult to venture the statement that every effort is being put forth to increase the volume of business throughout the West by methods that are most likely to react favourably.

It is, of course, too early to state what programme of new development is likely, though enquiries towards the end of last year appeared to indicate that some industrial expansion of note might take place during the present year, and that there may be more money available for building operations of all classes. In this relation, there should certainly be a distinct improvement over 1933 if necessary requirements are to be met in the erection of houses and commercial buildings, quite apart from any factory expansion. Any programme of moderate size would soon improve the home lumber market, which has been nearly at a standstill for some time, though the export business has been showing important increases.

The mining industry is looking for a steady improvement, and activities in relation to development would show a confident outlook in this respect. In British Columbia, Manitoba and western Ontario work continues on an increasingly larger scale, which will bring some important properties into production during the present year.

The Western agricultural situation is a matter of constant study of ways and means to bring it to a more stabilized level but, in the mean while, the Western agriculturist is bent on carrying on with ever-improving methods in the production of grain and livestock, having in view that ultimately his returns will justify confidence in Western Canada and its products. This is considered to be a reasonable attitude that will eventually realize greater value for farm products, more especially as the major effort is towards a higher standard that will meet export market requirements. This work is already showing results that further the belief that the correct course is being followed.

In Alberta and to some extent in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, drilling for oil and gas is to be continued. The Alberta programme is to be of considerable size, according to present indications, the more southern field getting the larger share of the proposed operations.

The sodium sulphate industry of Saskatchewan increased its production during 1933, and it is anticipated other deposits will be brought into operation during the present year. The clay areas of southern Saskatchewan continue to cause interest, awaiting further development at such time that capital and growing markets are available.

The fishing industry of the inland lakes of the three Prairie Provinces is being fully investigated in order that the marketing of the products of these lakes may possibly be put on a better footing, and efforts are being made to expand the marketable areas for whitefish, as well as for other classes of fish that are available in large quantities from the fresh water lakes of the West.

Report Finding Of King Solomon's Mine

Rhodesian Prospector Refuses To Give Exact Location

Finding of King Solomon's mine, search for which has caused the death of thousands has been reported by a prospector in Broken Hill, Northern Rhodesia. He declares that he discovered it while following a wounded buck, but refuses to give the exact location except that it is in the centre of a mine concession. For more than 300 years men have been searching for the legendary mine. In Solomon's day it was said to be so fabulously rich in gold that silver became of little value in his court. The search has gradually narrowed down to an area of about 250,000 square miles. Arabs tortured many natives in an effort to extract information about it and many Portuguese tramped hundreds of miles in search of it.

For the first 11 weeks of this year and last year (figures for the latter within brackets), the numbers of livestock shipped from Western to Eastern Canada were: Hogs, 57,995 (78,234); cattle, 18,554 (15,921); calves 148 (19); and sheep, 25,932 (21,480).

An oyster egg is about one-fifth hundredth of an inch in diameter.

Marvels of the Human Eye

By F. M. CROWE, Optometrist-Optician, Calgary

NO. 8—CATARACT

Much ignorance exists as to what a Cataract really is. A great many people think it is a growth of some kind on the outside of the eyeball which can be seen with the naked eye—but such is not the case.

A Cataract is that condition of the eye in which the Crystalline Lens has, from various causes, lost its former transparency thus preventing the rays of light from passing through it unhindered and focusing a clear image on the Retina. This loss of transparency usually progresses very slowly. Sometimes it starts from a single point or nucleus and gradually spreads throughout the whole Lens while in other cases the entire Lens is involved at the same time. In the latter case it is very difficult, even for an expert with instruments, to recognize it in the early stages but as and when it continues to progress, the Lens becomes more and more cloudy or "milky". The Retina becomes more difficult to observe (with instruments) and finally when the Cataract has become "ripe", the pupil instead of being black, is gray, which can be seen by anyone without the aid of instruments.

That condition then, in which the Lens has become cloudy is known as a Cataractous Lens or Cataract and glasses seldom offer much assistance. In fact, as the condition changes the Lens swells, necessitating the frequent changing of the glasses worn. Eventually the Lens having become so convex, the effect of the convex glasses formerly worn is neutralized and such people can read better (but not satisfactorily) without glasses than with those formerly worn and this is how the false idea of "second sight" originated. There is no such condition in normal life as "second sight" and such an apparent experience was or is due to the above cause. It is next to impossible, however, to make many people believe this. They insist in all sincerity that a relative lived to be over ninety years of age and could see to read without glasses although he formerly had to wear them, hence he must have got his "second sight". In the first place such people have no means of knowing the percentage of normal vision such a relative possessed at any time of life and the only foundation for their belief is that the relative before death could see better without glasses than with them—the explanation of which I trust I have made clear. So do not hope that you will ever "get your second sight".

Occasionally both eyes are simultaneously affected but usually the opacity appears in one Lens years in advance of the other but eventually both eyes become diseased. When the Cataract has become "ripe" the patient has difficulty in distinguishing daylight from darkness and in proportion to the progress of the disease, dimness of vision follows for which glasses are of little or no avail. Patient sees as if he were in a fog or as if a film is before the eyes. He usually has an aversion to bright light and in fact prefers a dark or cloudy day because he sees better and more comfortably. Cataracts do not cause the eye to "water" but the eye may become itchy.

Technically there are several varieties and the causes are many. There is the Senile due to extreme old age but fortunately few even very old people are afflicted. Injury to the eyeball at some time of life is a common cause while certain diseases of the body have a tendency to produce it, Bright's Disease for example.

There is no medicine, exercises or other "cures" for Cataracts although much money and time, with resultant sorrow, have been spent by people who have fallen into the hands of the fakir (usually by means of literature) who has promised cures with his nostrums or "special glasses". Surgery, performed by a skillful operator, when the Cataract is "ripe" is the only solution and when the opaque Crystalline Lens has been successfully removed from the eyeball and proper glasses supplied, there is nothing to prevent the rays of light from passing into the eye and focusing on the Retina and very often, a hundred per cent. vision obtains.

Device Beats Stop-Watch

Claimed To Clock Athletes Within Hundredth Of Second

A device whereby, it is claimed, it will be possible to clock athletes within one hundredth of a second has been invented by Dr. E. L. Harrington, head of the department of physics at the University of Saskatchewan. It applies the principle of the electric clock.

The new timer is said to be 20 times more accurate than a stop-watch. It calls for a 12-toothed wheel, placed between magnets attached to Saskatoon's electric power system. The alternating current of the system provides 120 impulses per second and the wheel would revolve 10 times a second. Each impulse moving. Dr. Harrington's device contains a counter like a speedometer, attached to the wheel, which automatically records the time between two pressures on a clutch. It can be read within a tenth of a revolution.

Hitherto the physics head has used the machine in his laboratory to record the gradually decreasing energy of the radiations from radium.

Increased Demand For Rubber

Modern Motor Cars Using More Than Ever Before

The yearly output of from 30 to 40 rubber trees is required to supply tires, tubes and parts for each modern car, according to American engineers. In 1925 the average car used about 3 lbs. of rubber parts in addition to the rubber in tires and tubes, while 1933 models carry from 30 lbs. to 60 lbs. of rubber parts. More than 90 per cent. of modern cars use at least 30 lbs. to 40 lbs. of rubber made up into 11 or 12 classes of parts, ranging from spark plug caps and door bumpers to torque spring insulators and engine mountings.

Of 13 swimmers, including nine women, who attempted to swim the English channel in the summer, only one, a woman, was successful.

SHE LOST 32 lbs.

New Frocks No Longer Worried Her

"How did she lose that 32 lbs. of fat?" is what you will be asking. Let her tell you herself—

"About six months ago, I weighed 178 lbs.—which I can assure you annoyed me very much. Everything seemed a worry to me, especially new clothes. My weight was so uncomfortable, and walking was unbearable. I was advised by a friend to try 'Lose Fat' pills. I am very glad I did. Now, I weigh 146 lbs. I lost 32 lbs. of fat. Now, for the last 6 months my weight has been 146 lbs. and I feel much better in health. I have all my weight tickets to substantiate my statements." (Mrs. J. M. P.)

European Travel Costs Lower

Reduced Railway Fares As Well As Hotel Rates

Contrary to a wide-spread impression, European travel costs this year, despite foreign exchange rates, are actually lower than they were in the peak travel year of 1928, according to the Cunard & Anchor-Donaldson Lines.

This fact is revealed in the inclusive tour costs of the big travel agencies and the reduced fares on railways, automobiles and hotels. Private automobiles can be hired at a much lower price, the costs being reduced by 44% in Paris and in Rome by 46%, with comparative reductions in other countries.

Hotel rates average 36% less all over Europe than they were in 1928. In Paris the reduction is 33½%, in London 21%, in Nice 26%, in Genoa 66%, in Rome 50%, in Naples 60%, in Lucerne 33%, in Interlaken 40%, in Heidelberg 25%, in Cologne 35%, in Amsterdam 41%, and in Brussels 23%.

Railway fares have been lowered in many countries. In Holland, for instance, the reduction has been as much as 22%, in France 30%, in Poland 25%, in Switzerland 30%.

Taxis have come down considerably; in Amsterdam, for instance, a taxi ride, regardless of the distance covered, costs you only 27c, half as much as in 1928.

Organized sight-seeing tours in Europe are considerably reduced. In Paris, they are 25%, in Nice 28%, in London 14%, in Brussels 22%, in Rome 25%, and in Heidelberg 37% less than in 1928.

These reductions more than offset any unfavourable effect of high exchange operating in some countries.

To Assist Livestock Industry

Want Reports On Detrimental Practices Of Livestock Buyers

To assist him in the presentation of the important information respecting the livestock industry to be submitted by joint representation of the government of the prairie provinces, Hon. W. C. Buckle, minister of agriculture for Saskatchewan, is desirous of having farmers interested in the production and marketing of livestock, report any specific example of where the producer is not the recipient of full market value for his livestock due to detrimental trade practices or other defect in the present system of marketing livestock. All statements should be accompanied by documentary proof. Opinions are valuable when based upon facts, but without them, are useless in a case of this kind.

It is expected that joint representations from the prairie provinces will be submitted to the Parliamentary Committee, Ottawa, very shortly. The Livestock Associations and the Livestock Pool, have been invited to present available data to Hon. Mr. Buckle, to be incorporated in a joint statement on behalf of the three prairie provinces.

OCCASIONAL WIFE

by EDNA ROBB WEBSTER
Author of "Joretta," "Lipstick Girl," Etc.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt and Peter Anson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart until Peter is able to provide for her. Peter is a young, struggling sculptor trying to win a competition for scholarship abroad and Camilla is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money when she comes of age and so is studying commercial art in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Werth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter, Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Matson, his former roommate with whom he has quarrelled. At a party at an exclusive club Peter entertains Camilla's guests with impersonations. When the rest of the members of the party go to a cabaret to continue the gaiety, Peter and Camilla slip off to the beach by themselves and fall asleep in the sand. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another boy are standing near them. This makes it necessary for Camilla to announce before the party that she and Peter are married. Boyman and Weeks, an advertising agency, where Camilla has submitted some of her work, send for her and tell her they have a new account which requires unusual treatment of juvenile art. The critics were enthusiastic about her work, and Mr. Weeks offers her a salary of $50.00 a week to start and a prospect of having it doubled. She tells Peter of her good fortune in securing employment. Mrs. Hoyt is also informed that Camilla has obtained work and is going to leave the Hoyt household. Avis Werth rents a studio on the same block as Peter, and invites him to have lunch there. He accepts reluctantly, but is favorably impressed with his visit. Camilla urges Peter to accept some of her earnings to help him along, but Peter refuses and they quarrel.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XXXVIII

She remained with him for another hour, striving to find the magic word or gesture that would break this spell of their disenchantment, but he remained aloof and impersonal. There was no ecstatic hour of murmured endearments and close embraces, while they discussed their work and hopes and plans. There was no deeply poignant meeting of blue and brown eyes, eloquent with wordless meanings.

She might have been any girl who had stopped in and interrupted his work, any girl who would have entertained with desultory words and a not too gracious manner—except for the first ten minutes which had been followed by their ugly quarrel. Their farewell was like an act in a play which they had rehearsed too many times to find exciting any more, and Camilla went out into the mellow autumn sunshine, seeing nothing, oblivious of sounds and feelings paralyzed. She avoided traffic by instinct and boarded the right car from habit. Nothing mattered.

Her world had turned upside down. She and Peter had said unkind words to each other, their eyes had avoided each other's in shame instead of meeting with sympathy. Somehow they had lost that precious, happy intimacy which had made any hope possible and every denial a promise. Her eyes stared out the window at the passing landscape. Buildings, houses, trees, lamp posts, were blurred like a photograph that was badly out of focus. No object was distinguishable.

When Camilla had gone, Peter sank into a chair and dropped his head into his hands. In his gesture was all the weariness and despair of his whole past. Never had life seemed so futile and ambition such a mockery. He might have known it would be like that, he told himself bitterly. Camilla had made practical use of her talent, and within a few weeks was offering to take care of him. He was a dreamer who couldn't even take care of himself.

He believed it was his pride that was hurt because he couldn't support the woman he loved, but it was just common human jealousy which gnawed in Peter's mind. Only the deadly poison of jealousy could so distort both love and pride. But the most malignant factor in jealousy is that it cannot be admitted, and therefore is difficult to cure.

The more Peter brooded over his situation, the more his anger grew, and his wrath settled upon Camilla because she was the object of his jealousy and of his overwhelming desire to succeed at the same time.

A light knocking at the door startled him violently, so deeply was he sunk into the absorbing quicksand of despair. He aroused himself with an effort and thought, "Camilla has come back to try to make it right. Well, she can't. I'm sick of it all."

The knocking was repeated, more imperative. He called crossly, "Come in."

The door opened and his hostile eyes met the pleasant greeting in Avis'.

"Hello, everyone," she called cheerfully, then stopped with an inquiring glance around the room. "Oh, I thought Camilla was here. I ran in to ask you both to have a little supper with me. I'm alone—and lonely." She laughed, without sincerity. "Didn't I hear her come in early this afternoon?"

"Yes, she was here," Peter replied tonelessly, and added, "but she had to leave early."

"Well, it's a good thing I came over in time to pull you out of your gloom. Another half hour and you would pass out." Her banter concealed her own suspicions of the situation and her good humor encouraged Peter. "All the more reason, then, why you should have supper with me, anyway. That's just one of the disadvantages of having a genius for a wife. Of course, she can't afford to spend all her time chirping you up."

"Oh, I'm all right," he insisted, smoothing back the bright, disordered curls with a big, shapely hand. "Tired, I guess."

"Of course, you are. You've worked all day, haven't you? Come along."

He obeyed meekly. Following Avis across the hall had got to be something of a habit. Rather a pleasant habit, too.

Avis was a clever actress. To prove that she had anticipated two guests for supper, she removed one of the plates from the table that was laid for three. She also talked easily and sparingly while she served Peter unobtrusively. Here was a "riff" within the lute of Peter's marriage, and she drove her wedge in cautiously. She restored his tranquillity, made him comfortable and entertained him quietly. Just what he needed.

When they left the table, Avis suggested without insistence, "You surely don't need to work tonight. You should rest. Sit down and be comfy for awhile. Is your piece almost finished?" She turned the volume low on the radio, and a sentimental voice crooned, "You take me to Paradise." Then she lighted a cigaret and held it to his lips. He took it with an amused laugh. She fired another for herself and dropped down lightly on the opposite end of the divan, arranging the pillows for her comfort.

It was strange how Avis, served and pampered and indulged, found her greatest pleasure in serving and humoring this young giant who looked as if he had been made to struggle with physical force instead of molding bits of clay. The ignominy of love—that makes servants of parasites and weaklings of slaves—He blew smoke into space, with contentment. "Yes, I'll finish this week. I had planned to have it bronzed before sending it to the exhibit," pensively.

"Of course, you should. Why not?" "That costs money," he replied, after a moment's hesitation, and met her glance defiantly. "So, I'll enter it as it is."

"Don't be absurd," she reproved him gently. "What's a little saving like that, if it hurts your chance to win?"

"I can't save what I don't have," enigmatically.

"Well, wouldn't it pay you to borrow money on a chance like this? Besides, supposing that you don't win the prize, you can put it into marble and sell it as you suggested before."

He made a gesture of hopelessness. "Who is going to loan money to a fellow who has made a clay figure, on the chance that it will win him a prize or that he might copy it in marble and perhaps find a buyer for it? That's all the collateral I have to offer. Did you ever hear of a financier who would take such a long chance as that?"

"A better guarantee would be your talent and ambition," she suggested.

He laughed ironically. "Who would believe that I had anything so valuable as that?"

"I know you have." Her eyes held his gaze, significantly.

"Oh—that," he dismissed the implication of her words, instantly. And added presently, "Funny how the women insist upon taking care of me. What's the matter with me, anyway?"

"Women?" Avis asked vaguely.

"Oh, Camilla and I just had a row about that this afternoon," he confessed bluntly. "She wanted me to let her help me with her money. Of course, she isn't making a fortune, but I guess she could spare a little. She thinks I should accept it, but what kind of a fellow wants his wife to keep him, even if he is trying to do something worthwhile? That wasn't in our agreement in the first place."

Avis exulted, but managed to keep her voice matter-of-fact and as impersonal as if she were answering Camilla herself when she said, "I think you are quite right about that, Peter. So many fellows are letting down on their pride these days, and allowing their wives to do it all. Of course you don't want to do that. I admire a man with some sand."

"Well, I have as much right to be independent as she has—and more. She wouldn't let me help her if she needed it, as things are with me now. Then why should I accept her money?"

"I think you are both right, under the circumstances. I see her point exactly—" Avis was shrewd, "—but I also see yours."

"I'm glad somebody does," he shrugged. "Well—that's that! What I think I had better do is to get a good honest job and go to work at something that turns to gold at the magic touch of toil."

"At what?"

"That's it—what. And where? Jobs being the least plentiful thing in the world just now, that complicates the problem even better."

"Then don't be silly, Peter. Let me tell you something. Will you listen?"

"With both ears," he grinned. "I'm beginning to believe the supposition is true that genuine artists haven't a grain of business sense—you being the first and best example I know."

"Is that all you have to tell me? I know that already," disdainfully.

"Well, that's a good start. You admit the truth. Then, see here! Did you ever realize that no business success is ever founded on hope and ambition and ability, alone? Every success has to have a financial foundation. Yet of all the stupid people in the world, artists imagine that they are not self-made unless they starve and freeze and live absolutely independent of all the rest of the world. Is that sane?" she demanded.

"Put into words, it doesn't sound practical," Peter admitted. "But what else can they do? You think I should take my wife's money, then?"

"Absolutely not. No more than a man with a lot of pride would take his wife's money to go into any business. But he would borrow money and sell stock for a foundation, and then set to work to make good. Your talent and your future are just as good risks as any business, and if you were as practical as you are artistic, you would borrow money to secure your peace of mind and a comfortable living, and then give yourself to your work. You owe that to yourself and Camilla."

Peter sighed. "I had hoped to make it alone."

"You are stubborn, aren't you?" Avis smiled.

"All right, granting that you are right and my future is worth an investment, who else could be convinced?"

"No one else needs to be," she replied casually, intent with lighting another cigarette. "I have money to invest, and right now I don't know a safer place to put it than in the career of Peter Anson, famous American sculptor of the future!"
